iXP1-500 Adapter Solves iPad USB Charging Issues

Ubergizmo — ... seem to have the solution in the form of the iXP1-500 adapter. It's basically a USB dongle with an additional female USB port that manages to work some magic to get enough power to your iPad in order to get it charging. At $4.95, sounds like a pretty cheap solution. Source : Link | ...

TechChee.com, shop online for gadget, gizmo and hot tech stuff — ... that connects to the USB 2.0 port of your PC. And a female USB type A connector at the other end that attaches to your Apple charge/sync cable's male USB Type A connector. Once connected, your iPad is guaranteed to be charged via the USB port without any problem. This little iPad adapter costs less than $5, which should come in handy, help eliminate the hassles of having to look around for power outlet while you need to charge your iPad. via Xmultiple gizmag ...

iXP1-500 USB Adapter Lets Your iPad Charge Anywhere

OhGizmo! — ... $4.95 iXP1-500 USB adapter from XP1-Power you'll never see that annoying 'Not Charging' message ever again. It sits between the iPad's sync cable and the USB port on any PC and does some kind of hokus-pokus allowing the iPad to charge no matter the hardware. The website is completely vague and useless when it comes to how it works, but for just $5 this could be a case of who cares, as long as it does. [iXP1-500 USB Adapter] VIA [Gizmag] ...

iXP1-500 Adapter To Solve iPad USB Charging Issues

TechFresh, Consumer Electronics Guide — ... If you are getting the "Not Charging" message in your iPad's status bar when you connect it to your Windows-powered computer via a USB port, then you might need the iXP1-500 iPad adapter from Xmultiple Technologies Inc. The adapter features a male USB type A connector for attaching to your computer's USB 2.0 port and a female USB Type A connector for attaching your existing Apple charge/sync cable's male USB Type A connector. ixp1-500 usb ipad adapter: cashing in on apple's usb stupidity technabob — ... That's the iXP1-500 iPad adapter, and it's only purpose is to ensure that an iPad can be charged on any USB 2.0 port. If this thing works as advertised, that means the iPad's cable is borked. And if Apple can afford to give away free bumpers for the iPhone 4's uncommon antenna problem, then Apple should also give this adapter to all iPad owners. Until then, you'll have to buy it from XMultiple for $5 (USD). via [gizmag] ...
