iXP1-500 iPad USB Charging Adapter

[Press Release]

Xmultiple Technologies, Inc., a manufacturer of connectivity products, has released their iXP1-500 iPad adapter which solves problems iPad users have charging from their USB port on their desktop and laptop computers.

iPad Charging with a USB port is in most cases not a feasible solution – The iXP1-500 solves this problem. The iPad has some cable charging issues which have not been fully resolved. There is a problem related the way the iPad charges with a computers USB port. Users of non Apple computer and some Apple computers cannot charge the iPad unless they use an electrical wallplate. The 10W Power Adapter which is packaged with the iPad is required if a user wants to charge the iPad. Therefore, to charge the iPad you have to be a slave to a wall outlet.

Unless you have a 2.0 USB connector on your laptop or desktop which will operate with the iPad for charging. Apple states on their website that some USB 2.0 ports and accessories do not provide enough power to charge iPad. When this occurs the message "Not Charging" appears in the status bar next to the battery icon. This appears to happen in most cases. As it turns out the iPad will not charge through USB ports on non-Apple computers. iPad charges just fine through the wall-charging brick and accompanying USB data cable. The iPad charges just fine when connected to USB ports on iMac, MacBook Pro. However the non-Apple as a whole have a problem.

- The iPad does not charge correctly when connected to a PC.
- The iPad does not charge correctly when connected to an older MacBook Pro (pre-Unibody).
- The iPad does not charge through USB hubs, regardless of what the hub is connected to (PC or Mac)

The iXP1-500 adapter has been designed to solve the USB power with an inexpensive solution. Simply attach the iXP1-500 adapter to your existing Apple charge/sync cable and your iPad will charge from your computer's USB port – Guaranteed. The iXP1-500 charges the iPad using the USB port on the users computer. No need for a wall outlet. No more frustration.

iXP1-500 Adapter features and Advantages

- Female USB Type A connector to attach to your existing Apple charge/sync cable's male USB Type A connector
- Male USB Type A connector to attach to your computer
- Integrated logic to Solve the iPads power requirement ? White Color to match your white Apple charge/sync cable
- Small compact form factor
- iXP1-500 Adapter is available in high volumes with inexpensive pricing
- The iXP-500 is packaged in a 2 inch by 6 inch blister packing design.

XP1Power suggested retail pricing is $4.99.

Ubuntu Linux founder Mark Shuttleworth says in his blog that Multitouch is just as useful on a desktop as it is on a phone or tablet, and reports that Canonical's UTouch framework has landed in Maverick and will be there for its release on 10.10.10.

Shuttleworth says you'll need 4-finger touch or better to get the most out of it, and they're currently targeting the Dell XT2 as a development environment so the lucky folks with that machine will get the best results today. By release, they expect you'll be able to use it with a range of devices from major manufacturers, and with addons like Apple's Magic Trackpad, and that the design team has developed a "touch language" that rather than single, magic gestures, is making it possible for basic gestures to be "chained, or composed, into more sophisticated 'sentences',"

Canonical Reveals Next Ubuntu's Touchy Side

The Register's Gavin Clarke says:

[Touchy tablets are hogging the headlines and giving Steve Ballmer sleepless nights, but Linux \[netbooks\]\(#\) are the focus of Canonical's latest push.](#)

Ubuntu's chief sponsor has released uTouch 1.0, a multi-touch and gesture stack for the Maverick Meekat release of the Linux distro coming in October.

Netbook Market Crisis As iPad Takes Over The World

9To5Mac's Jonny Evans says that "Apple's iPad has eaten the lunch of the nascent netbook industry," with Taiwanese industry-watch site reporting that major netbook vendor Asustek, lowering its netbook shipments targets for 2010's third quarter in response to the Apple iPad's marketplace advance.

Trick Your Ride Announces First Tricked Out Contest

[Press Release]

XL Mobile Applications has announced the launch of the first "Tricked Out" contest for users of their popular iPhone app, Trick Your Ride. Open to iPhone and iPad users, the monthly contest will give away 3 iTunes gift cards to users who receive the most votes for photos of their custom car creations. Trick Your Ride is available on the iTunes App Store.

Trick Your Ride turns the iPhone into ultimate auto customizing tool, allowing users to alter actual photos previewing costly upgrades, or to simply create the car of their dreams. Users simply import photos directly from their iPhone, their photo library or one of the app's 10 built-in vehicles and then let their imaginations run wild. The app includes over 100 accessories including wheels, spoilers, exhausts, decals, vents and more. A free-hand drawing tool gives users unlimited ways to customize their vehicle and the erase feature allows for elements of the original photo to be removed, adding even more flexibility.

Backgrounds can be added separately from the primary vehicle image, allowing users to overlay photos from their library or add one of 10 exotic locations included in Trick Your Ride. Once complete, users can save their work and share it via text message, email or even directly post their creations on Facebook.

..add decals, exhaust, and more!

Deadline for the first "Tricked Out" contest is September 15. For more information, visit the iTunes App Store or the XL Mobile contest page.

Device Requirements:

- (*) iPhone, iPod touch, and iPad
- (*) Requires iPhone OS 3.1.3 or later
- (*) 9.0 MB

Trick Your Ride 1.1 is $0.99 USD (or equivalent amount in other currencies) and available worldwide exclusively through the App Store in the Entertainment category.
